No more lost parcels

SYDNEY-BASED Transoft Corporation Pty Ltd believes it has solved a problem that has plagued the distribution industry for centuries — the lost parcel.

"We claim that our Proof of Delivery (POD) system is the only one in Australia that gives full details on every consignment including delivery, billing information and driver payments," the company's sales manager, Mr Alan Manly, said.

"Michael Porter, our managing director, and I took over Transoft in October 1985.

"The five-year-old company has been servicing the transport industry and has developed a piece of software to help the industry move its parcel shipments."

When they entered the transport industry, Mr Porter and Mr Manly realised the real challenge was not in the movement of freight but in the tracking of all paper work associated with the shipment of parcels.

They chose the Digital MicroVAX II computer as the basis for their system.

"Transoft's bar coded system allows a courier to locate the whereabouts of any proof of delivery docket within half a second," Mr Manly said.

"There is no longer any need for the shipment docket to be microfilmed — this can take 24 hours — and be entered into the computer system."

Mr Manly shows how easy it track down the whereabouts of a parcel through their Proof of Delivery system.
